

STUPOR TUESDAY

EDITOR'S NOTE: We're pretty sure this is how this shit works. Here are some of the more peculiar Primary practices practiced in Super Tuesday States. Actually, you might just want to read the Wikipedia article for Super Tuesday.

ALABAMA

Since recent fundamental changes in the Voting Rights Act, Alabama has enacted the "James Bird Laws." Critics say that the laws restricts voting access by requiring voters to be in possession of a white person's identification card. Votes are cast in traditional Alabama form: by shoving the ballot down the throat of a catfish.

ALASKA

Better known as the "Snowman Primary." Before voting, supporters build snow effigies of their candidates. Each campaign may submit a five minute tape-recorded speech to be repeated by the snow candidate outside of voting precincts throughout the day. The winner of the snow candidate contest gets two bonus delegates regardless of voter turnout. The future of this tradition is being called into question due to Climate Change.

ARKANSAS

No voting has taken place here since 1996, when the state's last eligible voter was arrested for felony theft of copper. FUN FACT: The entire state of Arkansas is populated solely by felons!

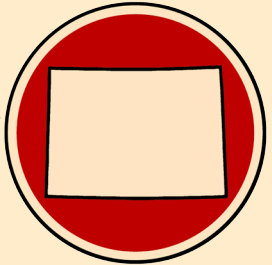

COLORADO

Voters somehow manage to put down the bong, hit pause on the Pineapple Express DVD, and leave the house. After wandering aimlessly around the neighborhood and swinging by Taco Bell for a pre-voting Doritos Locos Taco, they make it to the precinct. With their resin and Cheeto-encrusted fingers, they attempt to choose their candidate, but ... they forgot who they were going to vote for! They're WAY too high to be doing this ... Hit a random button! Watching CNN later that evening, they find out that Hitler won the Colorado Primary! By one vote!

Winners Don't Do Drugs!

GEORGIA

In lieu of voting – which citizens consider boring, lacking in celebrities, and is not sponsored by the Georgia Peach Council – delegates are assigned based on who's supporters can bake the best peach cobbler! This year's celebrity judges are Atlanta's own Andre 3,000 and Big Boi from Outkast!

MASSACHUSETTS

Voters pick their candidate, and then they count the votes. Nothing too zazzy about this one.

MINNESOTA

Due to a recent sponsorship deal with FX in exchange for Highway repair funds, delegates are awarded based on who can do the best stereotypical Minnesotan accent. The winner also gets a guest appearance on next season of Fargo! Must be 18 or older to enter. Void in some areas.

OKLAHOMA

Voter eligibility is determined by whether or not the potential voter can guess how many fingers a volunteer holds behind their back. Potential voters are given three chances. If one was unable to guess the correct number of fingers, they can still vote. It just won't count.

AMERICAN SAMOA

You're shitting me! Calling bullshit! "American Samoa" isn't any state I've ever heard of! Where's their star on the flag? Never seen it on an Interstate map. Are you thinking of Hawaii? Hawaii's one of those water states, just like Alaska.

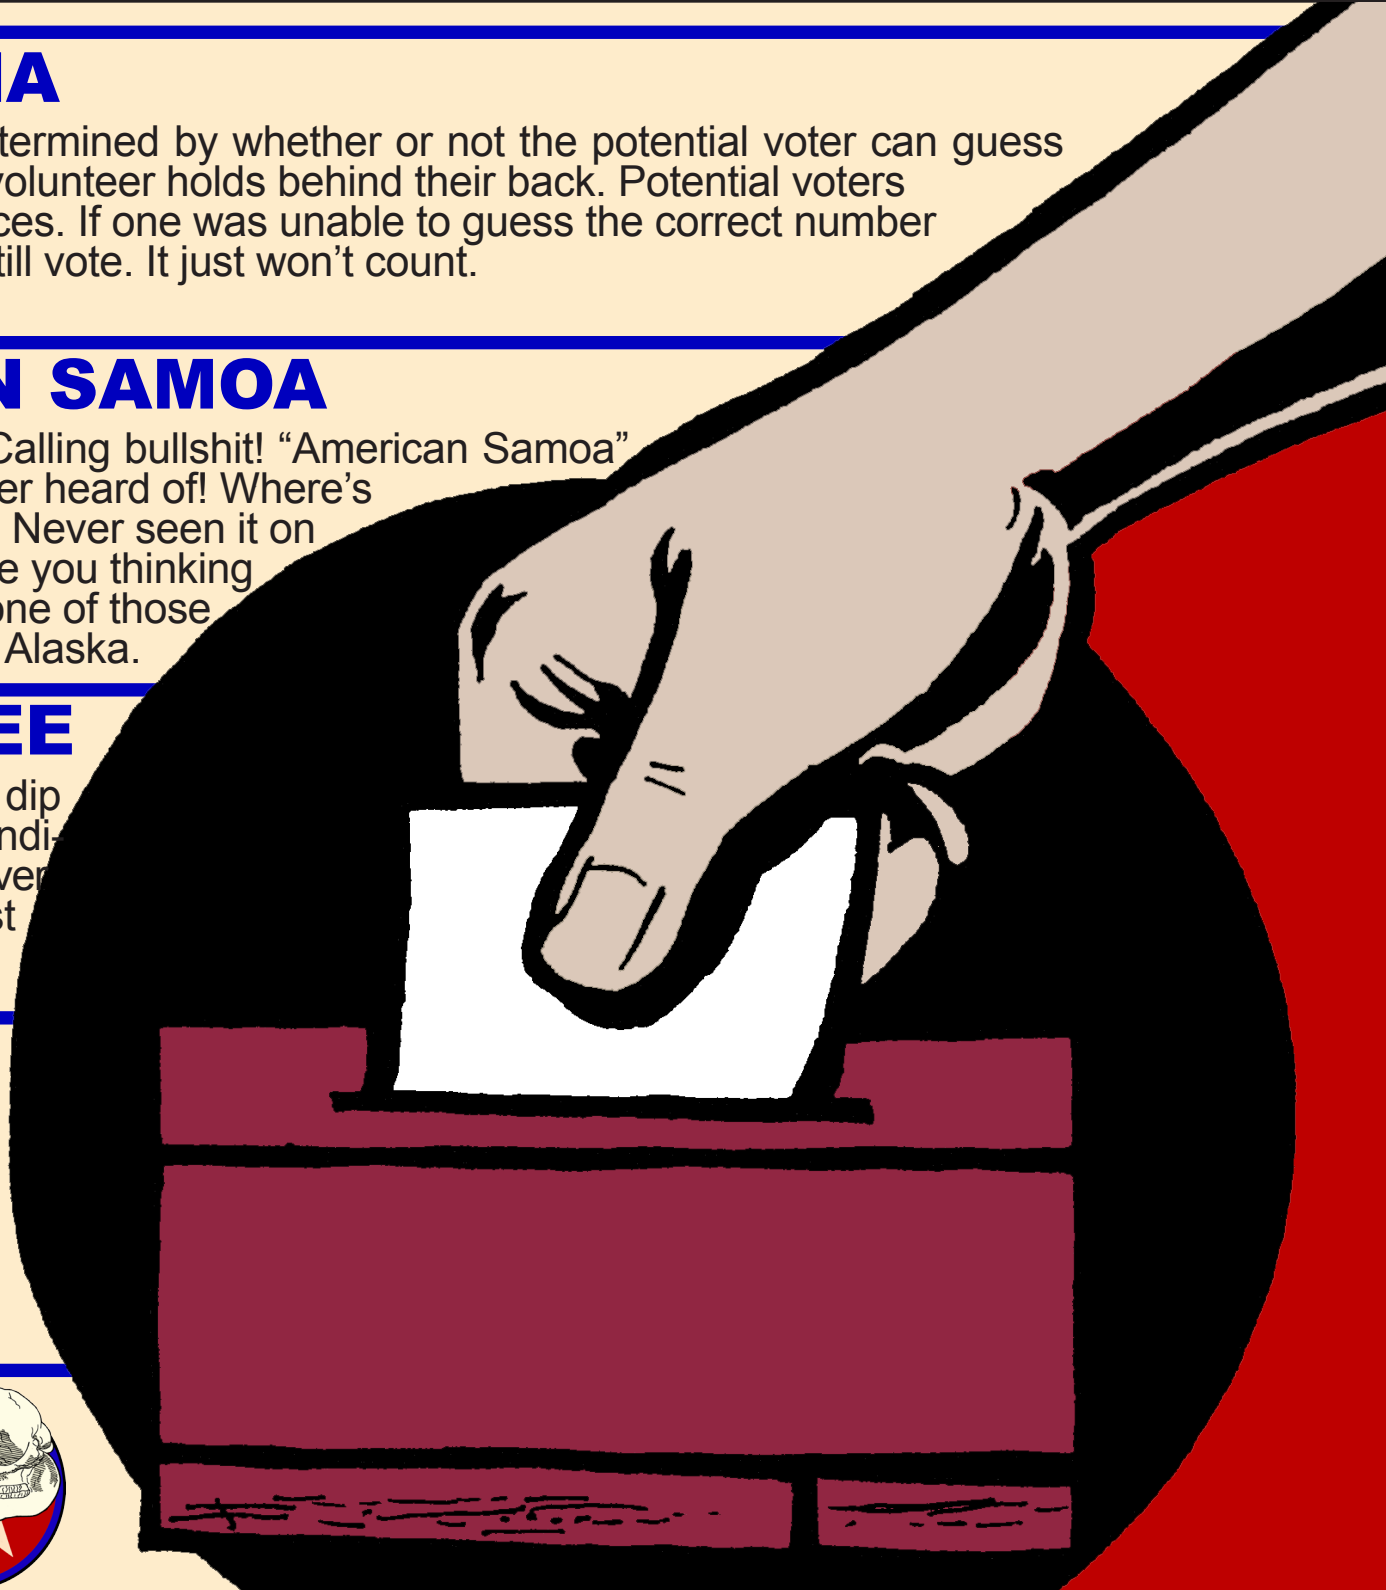

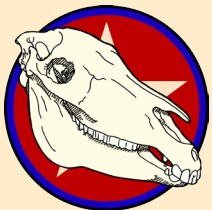

TENNESSEE

Supporters spit their dip juice into their candidate's spittoon. Whoever accumulates the most tobacco spit wins.

TEXAS

Decided by coin flip. Winner takes all. Ben Carson is kind of staking the future of his campaign on this one.

VERMONT

Regular voting procedures. Free bag of weed for the first hundred voters to arrive at select precincts. All voters get a complimentary blunt wrap.

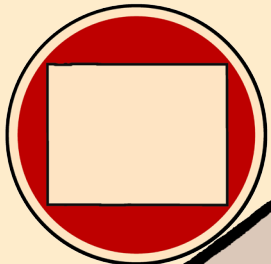

VIRGINIA

Candidates get the opportunity to convince Virginia that there is a Santa Claus, and that he endorses them for president.

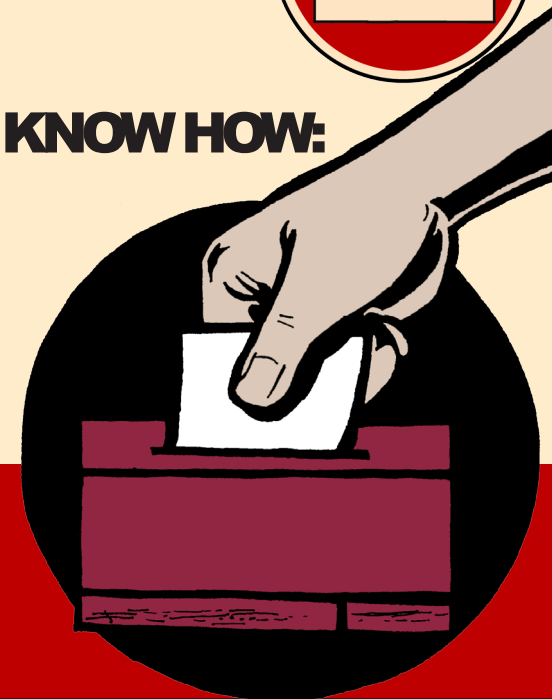

WYOMING

Wyoming's well known for it's Wild West atmosphere, and even more so for it's gun voting rights! Voters may fill out individual gun voter registration forms for any weapon over the age of 18 years.

NOW THAT YOU KNOW HOW:

*Get Out
and Vote!
Or Don't!*

Weird Voyeurism Issue #1

Coming This Spring!

For More Political and Cultural Nonsense
Follow Us On Twitter
@WeirdVoyeurism